

"I will not be subjugated"

Tactical Scenario

By Mark Henry

It is a relatively warm winter Saturday morning in Ohio, about 37 degrees. You and your significant other need to get some early morning shopping done at the local huge retail store before the weekend family activity starts.

You have been in this store a dozen times over the past few months in a nice section of town. As you exit the store, you look quickly out into the parking lot in the direction of a female scream. Your eyes are drawn to a green late model Ford van because you see a woman being thrown through the open sliding side door by a rather large male. No one else is around the van. She is screaming, "don't hurt me don't hurt me. Help me help me." The door is slide shut as the male crawls inside. It is about 7 AM and the sun is just coming up.

You ask your wife to call 911 as you sprint to the van, a distance of about 50 feet. As you get to the van, you notice it has not been started.

Inside the van, you can hear some muted screams. It sounds as though there is a fight going. You cannot see inside the van because the only windows are located in the passenger and drivers door. They are heavily tinted.

Your wife runs up to you to tell you the police are on the way. On your person is pepper spray, Sure Fire light, Benchmade folder, Kel-tec single stack 9 mm and a spare magazine.

Analyze the situation and take appropriate action. Describe your thought process and why you took the actions that you did.

(Dec 2006 #17)

Send replies to... <mailto:webmaster@teddytactical.com?subject=Tactical Scenario>